[Redacted]

Thank you for your letter of 13 March expressing your willingness to come to Washington to discuss your offer to assist the Central Intelligence Agency on a part-time basis. I have discussed your offer at length with the appropriate staff members. In brief, it is believed that, with your background and experience, you could be very helpful to us in several aspects of our work. However, in view of the short periods which you would be able to devote to the Agency, it is difficult to decide upon a project or assignment in which your time could be profitably employed.

Although we do not feel that we should impose upon you to the extent of asking you to make a special trip to Washington, we would like to discuss this matter with you further. To this end, and if agreeable with you, I will ask another of our representatives to seek an appointment with you in the near future.

I would welcome an opportunity to meet you whenever you are in Washington and hope you will find time to come by for a visit or preferably join me for luncheon. My telephone number is [Redacted]

Although I did not want to include it in the formal memorandum, I will insure that                      is not contacted by the same specialist who saw him before.
